Adobe Photoshop CC 2015 Version 18

Free software alternatives to Adobe InDesign The Adobe InDesign program (www.adobe.com/products/indesign.html) is used for both page layout and web design. You can use InDesign for all sorts of layout and design projects. It can create professional-looking print and PDF files, some of which can be exported as PDFs from any image editing program. It's a particularly good tool for designing web layouts. Free software alternatives to InDesign include the following:

- Microsoft Word: Available for both Windows and Mac, Word is a classic word processor. It enables users to create a variety of document types, including slides, business cards, greeting cards, brochures, business reports, and even HTML pages. It's fairly easy to use, but you need to be familiar with its many options.
- PageMaker (www.scarsoftware.com/products/pagemaker): PageMaker is a cross-platform program for creating and printing spreadsheets, documents, and web pages. In addition to the usual spreadsheet features, PageMaker also offers a good range of text options, graphics, and Web-based templates.
- Xara Web Designer (www.xara.com/products/webdesigner/): Xara Web Designer is an all-in-one web design program. It includes a full HTML editor, image cropping, and layout tools. It also includes code snippets for improving your web page design

Effects of episodic and continuous gestational stress on the development of offspring in rats. The effects of stress during the gestational period on weight gain, glucose levels, and behavioral patterns of young animals were assessed. Ovariectomized Wistar rats were studied when pregnant and during the first 4 weeks of life. Half of the animals were subjected to 6-hour immobilization stress in a tube cage, whereas the other half were not stressed (control animals). After weaning, the weight gain of the male offspring during the first week of life was lower in the stressed animals compared with that of the controls. However, the difference was not observed thereafter. The female offspring of stressed mothers had significantly higher blood glucose levels than those of the controls. During their first week of life, the offspring of stressed mothers showed higher levels of activity compared to those of the controls, but the difference was not observed thereafter. These data indicate that stress during pregnancy affects intrauterine development in a later life.

WASHINGTON — Marco Rubio is making another play for the Republican presidential nomination. But before he heads to the northeast to hold a fundraiser with influential donors in New Hampshire this weekend, he is already being hit on the trail in New Hampshire by his rivals and rivals-to-be. The first comes from New Jersey Gov. Chris Christie. “You know, I’m not going to be going there — so there’s one candidate who’s already there,” Christie said when asked about the trip on NBC’s “Today” show. “It’s called the United States of America.” (Christie is in Washington this week with John McCain.) Christie’s line that Rubio was “already there” was a subtle dig at the Florida senator’s repeated boasts that he is a one-man candidate and his presence in the middle of the Republican pack. Christie’s allies are urging him to go directly after Rubio in the next debate, scheduled for Thursday in Cleveland, to go after him for his statements that no one can be president if they lack foreign policy or national security credentials. “You’re going to have a different governor of New Jersey in Cleveland,” Christie spokesman Brian Murray told The Post. “If he thinks he’s going to sit next to someone like Ted Cruz on the stage and kick this guy, then he is

This application seeks funds to support the participation of five National Institute of Arthritis and Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases (NIAMS) Specialized Centers of Research (SCOR) in a cooperative program of research designed to further understanding of the factors underlying normal bone growth and turnover as well as the pathologic processes that occur in bone disease. The SCOR includes the Temporomandibular Joint Osteoarthritis Research Unit (TMJ-ORU), the Center for Musculoskeletal Health in Older Adults (CMHOA), the Rheumatoid Arthritis Pathogenesis and Mechanisms (RAPM) Center, the Musculoskeletal Biology Program (MSB), and the Women's Health Initiative (WHI) Program. This program consists of a unique combination of nationally recognized expert investigators with complementary, multidisciplinary expertise in basic, translational, clinical, and epidemiological research relating to the mechanisms of bone disease. The specific aims of the SCOR are: 1) to improve knowledge of normal mechanisms of bone growth, maturation, turnover, and remodeling. 2) to elucidate the pathophysiology, pathobiology, and pathology underlying abnormal bone growth and turnover in disease. 3) to identify clinical and biologic predictors of vertebral fracture and to identify and validate novel osteoporosis screening tools. The SCOR will provide outstanding opportunities for interdisciplinary translational research and for training of young scientists and health professionals in arthritis-related, musculoskeletal research. The major strengths of this program include participation by 20 highly productive, NIH-supported investigators from seven institutions, representing diverse areas of active research interest in bone biology and arthritis. Their research programs span a broad spectrum of disease, from basic science to clinical/epidemiological studies. There are three large, investigative units focused on basic, translational, and clinical research, respectively. These units will enable us to link scientific developments across the translational spectrum. Each of these units has a well-developed core of shared resources to facilitate efficient research progress. The SCOR includes an administrative core, the Biostatistics, Bioinformatics and Data Management Core, the Clinical Core, the Centralized Laboratory, the Imaging Core, the Clinical Research Core, the Epidemiology, Demography, and Statistics Core, the Data Management and Bioinformatics Support Core, the Human Tissue Core, and the Investigational New Drug Core.
