Screenshots: Details: Full Review YES, I want to leave a review and I accept - Apress Technology Review Software was easy to use and setup and had many of the security features I was looking for. I tried a lot of free / shareware password managers but could not find anything that could replace my old password manager app which did not have a lot of the features on my new system. I liked the fact that the program could easily export my old password list into it's new format and did not have to go through a big learning curve to get it going. I am not going to bore

Q: Is there a way to get an average of an integer in python? I'm curious as to whether there is a way to average an integer. For example, if I had the following: 1 2 3 4 5 and if I wanted to get the average of those numbers (say the average of 2 and 5 in this case would be 3) then I would have to convert them to a float first which i don't want. I'm asking because I have a script that I run on a server and I want to keep it lightweight if possible. Thank you in advance!

A: Just keep an average variable. $\text{average} = \text{sum}(x \text{ for } x \text{ in } [2, 5]) / 2$ print average # 3 Q: Java: Get file size of a file from server Is it possible in java to retrieve the size of a file (e.g. myFile.txt) on the server. Of course this file does not exist on my local computer. I'm developing a client that gets files from the server. If it does not find it on the server, it should request it from the server. The problem is that the server does not seem to have a file size. A: You can't do that through HTTP. If it's a file that you want to send to the client, you'll have to have it be a part of the response. Of course, if you know the exact name and size of the file, you can just send the entire response. Depending on how much data you need to send, you might also consider a compressed
